SERENADE TO THE WIFE OF GEN. MEADE.

About eleven o'clock on Saturday night the members of the Union League of Philadelphia, accompanied by a band, attended by an immense concourse of citizens, proceeded to the residence of the wife of General Meade. In this street, below Twenty first serect, in that city, and tendered her the complimentary honor of a serenade. The neighboring citizens flocked in until the crowd became interly impassable. The band performed the Star Spangled Banner, Hall Columbia and other national airs, and mist as Yankee Boodle died away Mayer Henry and Morton Medical appeared upon the steps of Mrs. Meade's residence, and formally presented her the congratulations and good wishes of the citizens of Philadelphia. They were greeted with loud and enthusiastic cheering. Mrs. Meade then very briefly acknowledged the courtest, and retired amid deafening applause and cheers for herset and her husband, the rictor of Gettysberg. The people present then cheered almost every general in the Union army. The band finally started the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" to the time of "Old John Brown," and the immense gathering dispersed to their homes. SERENADE TO THE WIFE OF GEN. MEADE.

SKETCH OF GEN. EWELL.

Lieut, Gen. Richard Stoddard Ewell was born in the District of Columbia, about the year 1820, and was, there-District of Columbia, about the year 1820, and was, therefore, when he died, about forty years of age. He was a brother to Professor Benjamin S. Ewell, President of the William and Mary College of Williamsburg, Va. He entered the West Point Killiary Academy as a cader from the State of Wirginia during the year 1836, and gradu in the 30th of June, 1840, standard No. Effects w. second fleutenant of the First Dragoons on the first day of July, 1840, and after five months service received has full rank as a commission on the first of November, 1840. On the 1811 day of September, 1845, he was promoted to first lieut mant and served in Mexico as senior lieutenant in Color al Mason's regiment of Dragoons. He commanded a squadron of cavalry after the fall of the commanders at was awarded during August, 1848. On the 4th of August, 1849, he was promoted to captain, and commanded Com-pany G, which same position he held at the outbreak of the rebellion, then standing No. 7 on the lineal roll of drawith the Indians of the Coyoters and Mojolion Apache bribes of New Mexico, and was greatly distinguished both by his fighting and for his planning of the action. He next in 1858 took charge of and commanded the troops at Fort Buchanan in that Territory. He was however, superseded the next year by brevet Lieutenant Colonel I. V. D. Reeve and afterwards by Lieutenant Colonel Mor-

the United States Army and joined that of the rebels in Virginia. When the rebel army was organized Ewell made a brigadier general of the provisional army of sebel States. He did not come prominently before the public until the time of the Banks' retreat, May, 1862, on the 24th chased up Banks from the Shenandonh. He was also engaged at Cedar Mountain, August, 1862. He was engaged in several other principal battles of Virginia, and took a very prominent part in the battle of Chancellorsville, where he was promoted to be a Lieutenant General of the rebel army and take charge of the late Stonewall Jackson's corps. He led this corps into Pennsylvania, and for several days threatened Har-risborg, Pennsylvania. During the recent battle of Gettysburg he received several wounds, from the effects of which it appears his strength has given way, and he died on the morning of July 6.

During one of his engagements he lest one of his legs and was always strapped to the horse while in the field. He has distinguished himself during the war of the rebellion, and was considered by General Stonewall Jackson the only fit man to take the place made vacant by his own

Capt. Wellington, of the bark Reindeer, from Barbados June 21, makes the following report:—On the 20th of June there arrived at Barbadon a boat with one lieuwas then burning a few miles to windward of the island. They reported themselves as a prize crew from the pirate Florida, who were put on board an American bark loaded ago, with orders to cruise in a certain place until the

After cruising beyond the allotted time and not me the Florida, and finding they were getting short of pro-visions, they coucluded to run for a port and did so. After making Harbades, and when some twelve miles from had, they set the vessel on fire and burned her, as they say, to avoid recapture, and came ashore in the boat. They refuse to give the name of the vessel or any particulars except what I related above. After being kept an hour in the boat to be examined at the Custom House, they were allowed to land. I saw them as they landed. The officers, I should judge were Americans, but they made a sorry appearance, and looked like anything but officers or seamen, being dressed in a kind of linesy-woolsey sack coat, threadbare and dirty, with other exempts of coarse stuff to match.

other carments of coarse stuff to match.

The men, who appeared to be Irish and English, were coarse blue fiancel shirts and pauts, with caps similar; their appearance was more uniform.

Strike at the Navy Yard.

The ship joiners of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, who struck lately for higher wages, had a meeting yesterday in reference to their late strike. As the time specified by Admiral Paulding for them to return to work has expired, they were all discharged, and they immediately appointed a committee to visit Washington, to confer with the Secretary of the Navy.

NEWS FROM GEN. ROSECRANS' ARMY.

The following is a summary of the meverne

Further developments proved that the rebel retreat from this place had not been so clear as my first despatch indicated. Haste to record the event induced me to give but a superficial examination. The works are much stronger than I supposed. Fort Rains, a large bastion, is stronger than I supposed. Fort Rains, a large outer works, bearing upon every road and important point in the vicinity. The real weakness of Bragg was in not holding Manchester. As soon as General Resecrans took Man-

"stores" we have a large amount of meal and other pro-visions. After finding, on the 1st inst., that Tuliahoms was evacuated, Rosecrans threw forward his force in rapid pursuit, General Thomas moving on the Manchester road from Manchester, and McCook on the road from of striking the enemy, moving nearly due east to get on the military road built by Bragg. This General Thomas waited to do until the enemy was well beyond the angle and when he was crossing Eik river the division of General Negley encountered the rear of Hardes at a point about four miles north of Elk river, and skirminhed with it all day, losing four or five killed and wounded. Among the prisoners was Lieutenant Platt, of the Eleventh Michigan.

the prisoners was Lieuteant Platt, of the Leventh Michigan.

The enemy's rearguard, under Wheeler, made a stubborn resistance, detaying Gen. Negley so that the rebel trains got beyond the river during the night of the lst. This same process on the part of General Buckner enabled General Bragg, with the reserve artiliery, 4twenty six pieces), to cross Elk river at Estell Springs on the night of the lst, and to reach the mountains. The enemy on both roads burned the bridges, and the rear guards took up positions in hastlly built works on the opposite side of the river. It was understood this was for the purpose of delaying our crossing as long as possible, in order to enable the lufantry and trains to get into the mountains. To sid them in this very heavy rains came up and the river rose very high. The natives say they never saw the river so high.

The situation on the night of the 1st was: McCook at Estell Springs, with Buckner opposite the forks: Thomas very high. The natives say they never saw the river so high.

The situation on the night of the Ist was: McCook at. Estell Springs, with Buckner opposite the forks: Thomas at a point two-miles up the river, with the enemy on the opposite bank. The main rebet army was in the vicinity of Winchester and Decherd, in camp, ready to move on the 2d into the mountains. Department headquarters were on the same night established at Tullahoma. General Crittenden, with a full corps, was sent by a rapid march to take possession of the road leading from Dechera, via Tracy City, to Chattanooga. This was successful, and forced the enemy to take the roads across the mountains. On the morning of the 2d McCook crossed at the mouth of Rock creek, below the enemy's position, in front of our right, and thus flanked the enemy, who withdrew to Winchester and the momanns. At the upper bridge, where Negley was posted, similar maneuvring was made with little better success. Roussean and Brannan were sent to the upper crossing to come down in the rear of the enemy, whom Negley was to detain, not drive. It was thought that Rousseau could cross by ten A. M.; but the swollen state of the river prevented, and only a few troops got across in time. Meantime a cavalry brigade came in upon the right flank of the enemy. The firing was midtaken for that of Rousseau, and Negley opened with two batteries on the enemy's pesition, one thousand yards distant, dismantling one gun and killing several robel gunners. They were taken completely by surprise and made but few replies, retreating precipitately. Meantime Turchin had engaged the rebel right, and after a fight of two hours drove it and the entire robel force from the field, killing thirty-five of them.

The fight only onded at two P.M. The troops were unable to cross until the morning of the 3d. They moved only a short distance. Negley encamping on the battle field, and Reusseau and Brannan on the bank of the river. McCook menutime advanced to and occupied Winchester, Decherd and Cowan. This mornin gone. We lost not over 1,100 men by casualties of all kinds. The troops suffered much from alternate best and rain. We have 1,500 to 2,000 prisoners, many of them deserters. The enemy is entirely out of Tennersee, and our communications intact. The railroad will be running to this point to-morrow.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

General Sickles has not been so well to-day as he was many of whom had called, among them General Hocker, reached, but strong hopes are entertained of his recovery. The amputation was skilfully made within an hour after the wound was received, and no arterial blood was lost. sensibility was produced, the General seemed to believe himself still at the head of his corps on the field of batthe and was giving orders to those around bim as if in the heat of the engagement. Upon his return to con-sciousness he inquired anxiously about the progress of the battle, and said he would give his other leg, and his

The MERALD correspondents at Harrisburg and ele-where in Pennsylvania, speak of large numbers of paroled prisoners arriving at those points. By the terms of the cartel agreed upon between Commissioners Ludiow and Ould all such paroles are irregular and hwalld, and the me: should be at once returned to their regiments for duty. None are acknowledged as prisoners of war and subject to exchange or release from active duty until exchanged, except prisoners actually in possession and delivered up at City Point, and at some other place in the Southwest to be agreed upon. The only exception to this rule is that the commanding generals of armies in the goold may, for special reasons, agree to an exchange of prisoners taken during the operations of their respective forces. It was in ac-cordance with this rule that General Lee, after the battle of Friday, at Gettyaburg, asked for an armistice for the exchange of prisoners taken, well knowing that be could not make those in his hands available in exchange in any transfer them to the custody of the military authorities
